

to marry, the same-sex couples are denied basic and elementary rights of adopting and parenting children, enjoying property rights through inheritance and succession, and mental peace, which together have a debilitating effect on their emotion and health, thus violating their basic fundamental rights.

Rohatgi said the petitioners do not want to get into the controversy of seeking not a crime while striking down part of the British-era law which criminalised it amendments in religion-specific laws like the Hindu Marriage Act, but are requesting the SC to interpret the SMA to make it gender-neutral so as to enable same-sex couples to marry and register their marriages and enjoy a married life like other citizens.
